Asia and Europe

After the decision of the United Kingdom to leave the European Union, Asian countries are waiting. What will be the new regulatory framework between the UK and the EU, and how will it affect the relations between the UK, the EU, and the rest of the world. Europe is, indeed, of huge importance to the UK: the UK imports from Europe are more than three times its import from Asian countries and the UK exports to Europe are almost five times its exports to Asia.

There has been no excitement in Asian capitals at the prospects of the unravelling of ties between London and continental Europe. South China Morning Post echoed this (in its editorial on 15 March), hoping that this “divisive uncertainty” be sorted out the sooner the better. A jittery atmosphere in Europe as well as in Asia nurtures fears of domino effects; that one problem will push another and risk a further tumble down.

For Asia House, it is quite obvious that Denmark and Asia will benefit from closer ties and knowledge-sharing. In April we look forward to hosting an event with Mikkeller, focusing on a “newcomer’s” entry into the Asian markets and to welcoming Asian Ambassadors and our partners to a lunch dedicated to further analyzing the impacts of Brexit on the global economy.
